How to Measure for Moto Leggings

Proper fit matters — not just for comfort, but for protection. Moto leggings should feel secure and supportive without restricting movement.

1. Waist

Measure around your natural waistline — the narrowest part of your torso (usually just above the belly button).
Keep the tape snug but not tight.

Fit tip:

Moto leggings should sit comfortably at your waist without rolling down when you bend or ride.

2. Hips

Measure around the fullest part of your hips and seat.
Stand with feet together for the most accurate measurement.

Fit tip:

This is often the most important measurement for leggings. If you're between sizes, choose based on your hip measurement for the best fit.

3. Inseam

Measure from the top of your inner thigh down to your ankle.
This ensures the leggings hit at the right length and your armor (if included) aligns properly.

How Moto Leggings Should Fit

Snug but not restrictive
No pulling or strain across hips or thighs
Waist stays in place when sitting or leaning forward
Armor (if applicable) sits correctly at the knees and hips
Comfortable stretch for mounting, stopping, and long rides

They should feel supportive — like performance wear — not loose like lounge leggings.
